HEXA Renewables Announce Strategic Partnership with Bison Energy

for Solar and Energy Storage Projects in Japan

HEXA Renewables, a platform owned by I Squared Capital, are excited to announce a strategic equity investment agreement with Bison Energy, focused on solar energy and Battery Energy Storage Systems (BESS) projects in the Japanese market.

Under the terms of the agreement, HEXA Renewables will work together with Bison to further develop and construct its pipeline of solar and BESS projects in Japan. This collaboration will significantly strengthen both companies' positions in the new energy sector, accelerating project development of Bisons project portfolio.

Michael Zhang, CEO of Bison Energy, commented, "Our partnership with HEXA Renewables represents a major milestone for Bison Energy. With the support of HEXA Renewables we are poised to fast-track the development of new energy projects in Japan, helping to drive the global energy transition."

Vince Choi, Group Chief Commercial Officer, HEXA Renewables added, "We are thrilled to form this strategic partnership with Bison Energy. The company's expertise and track record in the renewable energy sectors impressive. We look forward to advancing Bison's clean energy project pipeline in Japan, fostering mutual growth and a win-win outcome."

PRESS RELEASE

This capital partnership underscores both companies' strong confidence in the potential in the Japanese market. It also marks a key step for Bison Energy in expanding its global footprint in the renewable energy sector. Moving forward, both parties will leverage their respective strengths to advance large-scale renewable energy projects and contribute to the achievement of regional and global sustainable development goals.
